Sharon,
As one of the septet's your marvelous. Have

Sharon,
This year has really been hard, but it has also been the one when I have had the most fun. I hope that you'll be as happy your senior year as I have been this year.
Don't give up because you so much talent at everything—even though you spread yourself pretty thin sometimes.
Remember

You are the one who must decide whether it's worth
it or not.
And if you happen to find that moment when you aren't ready to collapse, remember me, o.k.?

Love always,
Barbara

Sharon,

You heard it from everyone as the year began: "We've got spirit." It was true then and it's true now.

But one other thing was also true. 1968 was a new year at a changed and changing school. Never before had so many Maurites had things so good. Never had Maur Hill been so relaxed and free. And never had so much depended on the individual student.

'68 was a year of enthusiasm and disorganization, of conviction and hesitation, of experimentation and dissent. It was a year of conflicting opinions, in its organized activities and its day-to-day life; a year of both spectacular efforts and spectacular apathy; a year of high points and low; a year of bits and pieces.

Mr. Andra, (above) another stop in the long series for registration of Bernie Headly. (left) Dan Lorenz helps Garth Schulte unpack.

Registration

Old students returned in the fall to find a campus transformed by a new dormitory, but still rich with the laughter of last year's acquaintances. New students found fascination and bewilderment as their "big brothers" introduced them to Maur Hill and that unique adventure destined to be called the 67-68 school year.

To all of you who made this possible, thanks.

Speakers

Maur Hill Audiences have many fascinating traits, as any dramatics club member can testify. They had ample opportunity to display them again at the Wednesday assemblies and elsewhere. Besides movies and slides on subjects from car crashes to Quasimodo, Maurites, in fragments or en masse, assembled for lectures and discussions on Vietnam, Ted Kennedy's speech in Topeka, college information and propaganda, fall awards night and adlibbing from Christophers. But, despite all this edification, most Maurites hung onto their traditional view point on assemblies: "Talk, talk, talk! When do we eat?"

Mr. Robert Henry (top) and Mr. Evan Taylor (center) spoke on the pros and cons of the war in Vietnam. Rabbi Francis Meyer (bottom) explained the differences between Christianity and Judaism.

Dramatics

Theater lovers enjoyed two brilliant successes in the beginning of the school year, "A Thurber Carnival" directed by Father Jordan and "Little Moon of Alban" directed by Mr. Ramsey. At semester, Father Jordan accepted an opportunity to work for his Masters Degree at Catholic University and so Father Wilfred took control of the Maur Hill Dramatics Club, hoping to put on "The Sound of Hunting," Edward Albee's "The Zoo Story." In addition, Mr. Ramsey produced a massive musical, "Carnival."

Where's Charley?

"It was the biggest and best production we've ever done," sighed a proud Father Jordan after the last curtain call. WHERE'S CHARLIE? was success that overran into a third night performance, an elephant of a prop that took an army to move, straw hats, candy-stripe coats and long, gorgeous dresses, a funny, little photographer and a happy, memorable experience.

Glee Club

The Glee Club this year was as good as ever, singing alone and with the Academy Jr-Sr. Chorus at the Christmas and Spring Concerts at Maur Hill and the Mount. The Glee Club was one of the soloist groups at Music Day, again held at St. Benedict's.

Try-outs for Glee Club were fairly large this year, allowing a good deal of trimming and producing a pretty good group. But there were a few minor problems such as conflicts with Latin III-IV, time usurped by the Wednesday assemblies, and Fr. Camilus' pernnial complaint: "Will you guys please shut up?"

Accompanist Peter Cadorette solos with Frederic Chopin's waltz in C# minor during the Christmas Concert.

Band

This year Mounties joined Maurites to participate in a new experiment, a combined band. Minstrels of both schools accumlated at the Maur Hill band room Mondays and Wednesdays for the practice session directed by Father Camillus and Sister Marjorie. It was a tough job to prepare the band for the usual concerts, pep rallies and games, but for all the raw notes, they achieved a moderate degree of skill and were well recieved by the audience.

The first big victory for the Student Council came with the Big Brother program. During these three weeks they showed all the students, old and new, what it means to be a Maurite. It was there, in the first weeks, the assemblies, the pep rallies and the Psychildelic Send Off that the Student Council lit the fires of enthusiasm. To feed these fires throughout the year became their duty and a job very well done.

M-Club

Only the best ever made it into the M-Club. To qualify a prospective member had to earn a major letter. Then, ignoring the horror stories of the older members, disregarding the threats made by the charming, lovable M-Clubbers, he had to tell Jack Clements that he wished to join. Then came the "M", the knives of Jim Donahoe and all the other neighborhood sadists, the questions and the notches. And finally, the feared, the terrible, the hideous.....Hell Night!

Rifle Club

The Rifle Club had a new leader this year, Mr. Jim Doyle from St. Benedicts who replaced Fr. Bruce. This year's club had quite a few members. One in particular stands out; Kip Bishop, who is the National Junior Trap Shooting Champion. Every afternoon you could hear the crack of rifle fire which proved the club was a tremendous success.

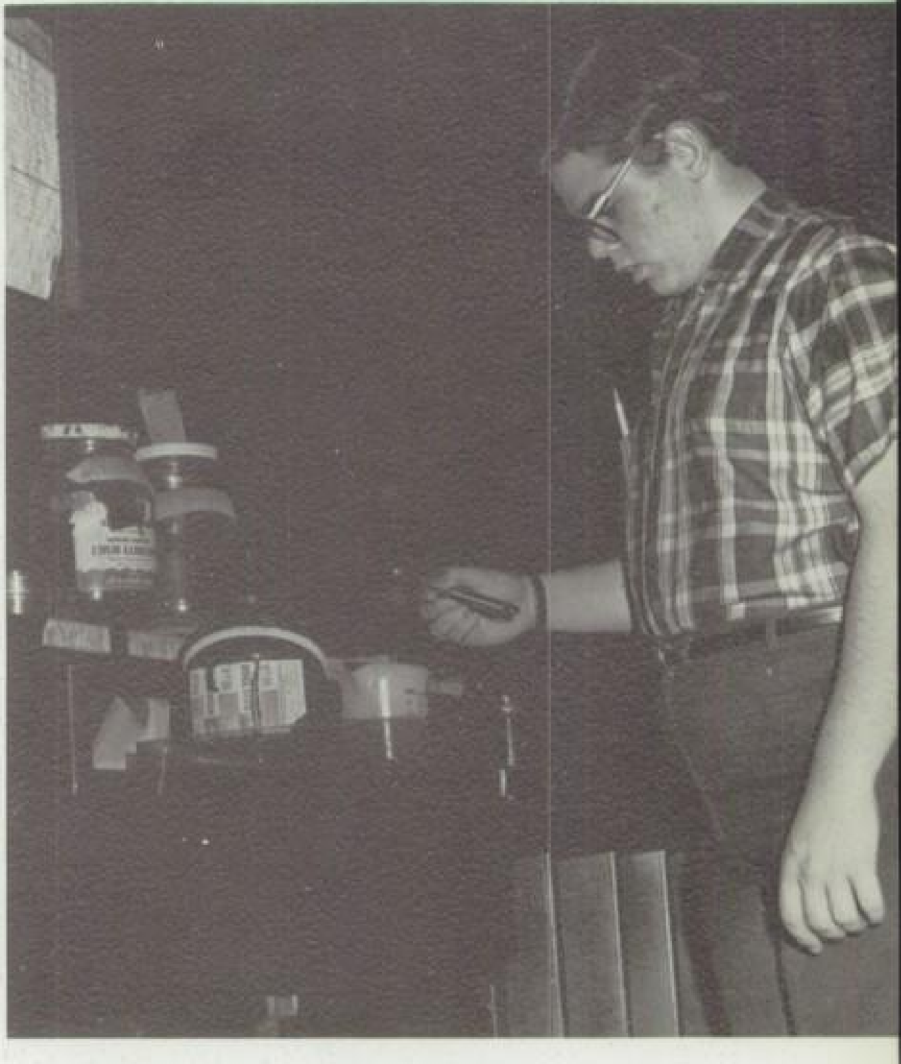
Camera Club

What makes a photographer slip into the clamy crypt and isolate himself for hours from the sun's life-giving rays. What spell draws him there, behind the draped canvas, mixing the strange liquors and weaving with tiny threads of light like an ancient alchemist? Can it be that they have discovered an elixir of life? No . . . just a way to hold onto pieces of it.



The Dr. Berney Science Club drew a large underclassman membership this year to help in the funds raising drive. They sold Raven buttons and sponsored dances to pay for the long planned observatory. They also planned certain activities like an overnight outing to Lake Placid, movies and guest lectures. The Science Club was a really unique experience for all who joined.

Great Books

Great Books became co-educational this year as Mounties joined Maurites to pursue controversial authors and their works. The informal discussions took place in the lounges of St. Leo's Hall where familiar and comfortable surroundings stimulated free conversations. Despite the usual postponed meetings, lost or unread books, the program was generally successful and popular.

sports

Sports are a kind of focus for Maur Hill life. They're participation sports, whether you play the game or not. You talk and clap and yell at pep rallies, scrape up money for bus trips and sit through noisy, smoky rides, sit in the gyms or at the fields, and yell and scream and whistle and pound and hope like mad that MH will have this one. And after it's all over you run out to let the team know that you're proud of them, welcome the bus back . . . and slowly you realize that it doesn't matter whether we lost or won. What matters is what you remember: the support you gave, the spirit you felt, the game you fought.

Coach Guy Galley

This year's season was dedication that begun in August before regular practice. It was the fierce "One on one," "Don't-stop-until-I-tell-you" drills of Coach Doyle. It was the called back touchdowns against Benton and Maryville. It was the bitter sideline sadness at Homecoming. It was the encouragement of Coach Galley, the enthusiasm of the Mountie and Maurite section, the midnight pep rallies welcoming the team home—even when they lost. It was a losing season, a 2 and 6 season, a heart breaking season.

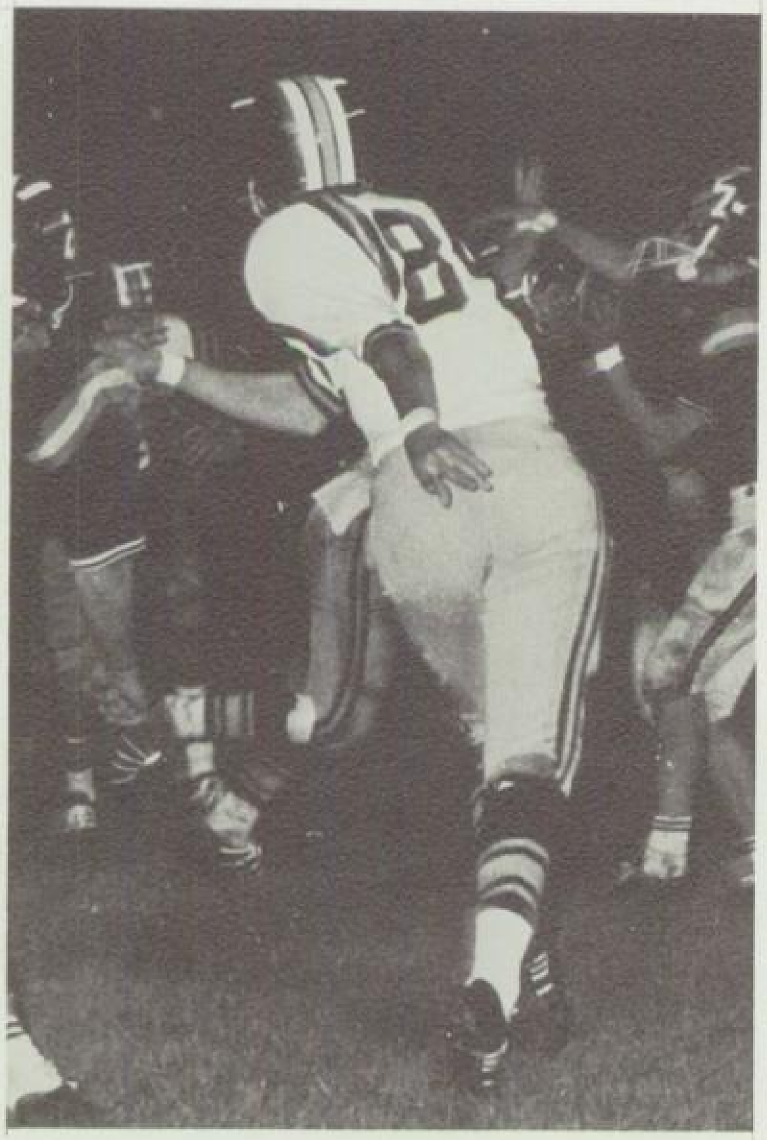
But Little Mistakes

Burn, baby! Burn! The accursed Immac effigy.



(above center) Randy Schrick barely gets off a pass. The Ravens had 12 first downs to the Savages' 7. Little mistakes kept MH from putting them together for scores. (above) George Richardson rushes in on the Savannah quarterback. (left) Mike Colgan and Ed Jones lead Randy Schrick for long gains against Benton. The Cardinals were just strong (and lucky) enough to keep the Ravens from scoring more than once. In one of these pictures Randy Scrambled 40 yards to score but the ball was called back on a much disputed clipping penalty.

(above) Randy fakes a hand-off to Jack and Tim Diebolt moves up to get the ball. Steve Bernardi and Bob Sanders cleared the area on the side of the picture for Tim to charge through. Three o'clock. Practice. The players stroll down from the academic building and through the Roost. They buy candy bars "to get energy", waver by the TV to see what the girl on DATING GAME looks like, and finally shuffle into the locker rooms to dress for an afternoon of "Hustle, men. Hustle!" Patterns...jump shots...free throws ...rebounding...defense...passing...til a quarter to six when the athletes tramp back down to the locker rooms and shower off the sweat.

Friday or Saturday night. The game. "Here we go, Ravens. Here we go!" "Who's gonna win this game: Ravens! Ravens!" "Let's go Raven, oo-ah!" "..two! two! two!..." "We're from Maur Hill, couldn't be prouder...!" "Two bits, four bits, six bits a dollar. All for Maur Hill stand up and holler...!" "Ravens are flying high in the sky..."

And the contest is over. The throng of cheerers leap down from the stands and surround the sweaty bodies with praise.

Maur Hill is a school. And because it is, the faculty has more basic influence than any other group. They select and mold the structure and the students from which a year will grow.

Maur Hill's faculty isn't perfect; they are only men and men can be weak, petty, over-indulgent, imperceptive or harsh. But teachers at Maur Hill are a notch above most. Beyond the personality and idiosyncrasies of the individual teacher, there is a dedication to both job and vocation: helping students to learn and grow and trying to impart a taste for learning and growth.

That's what Maur Hill is about.

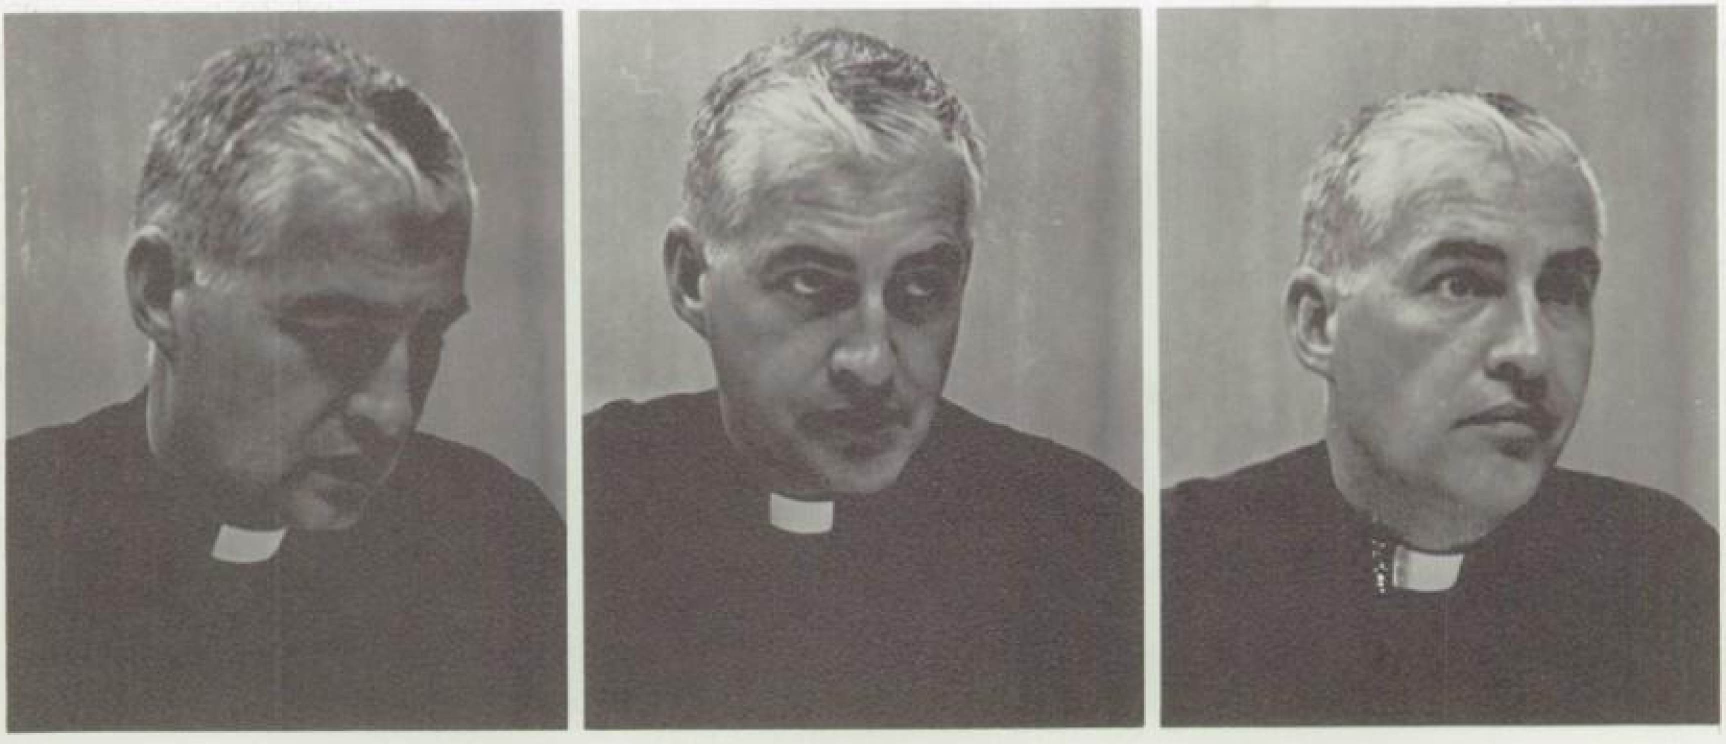
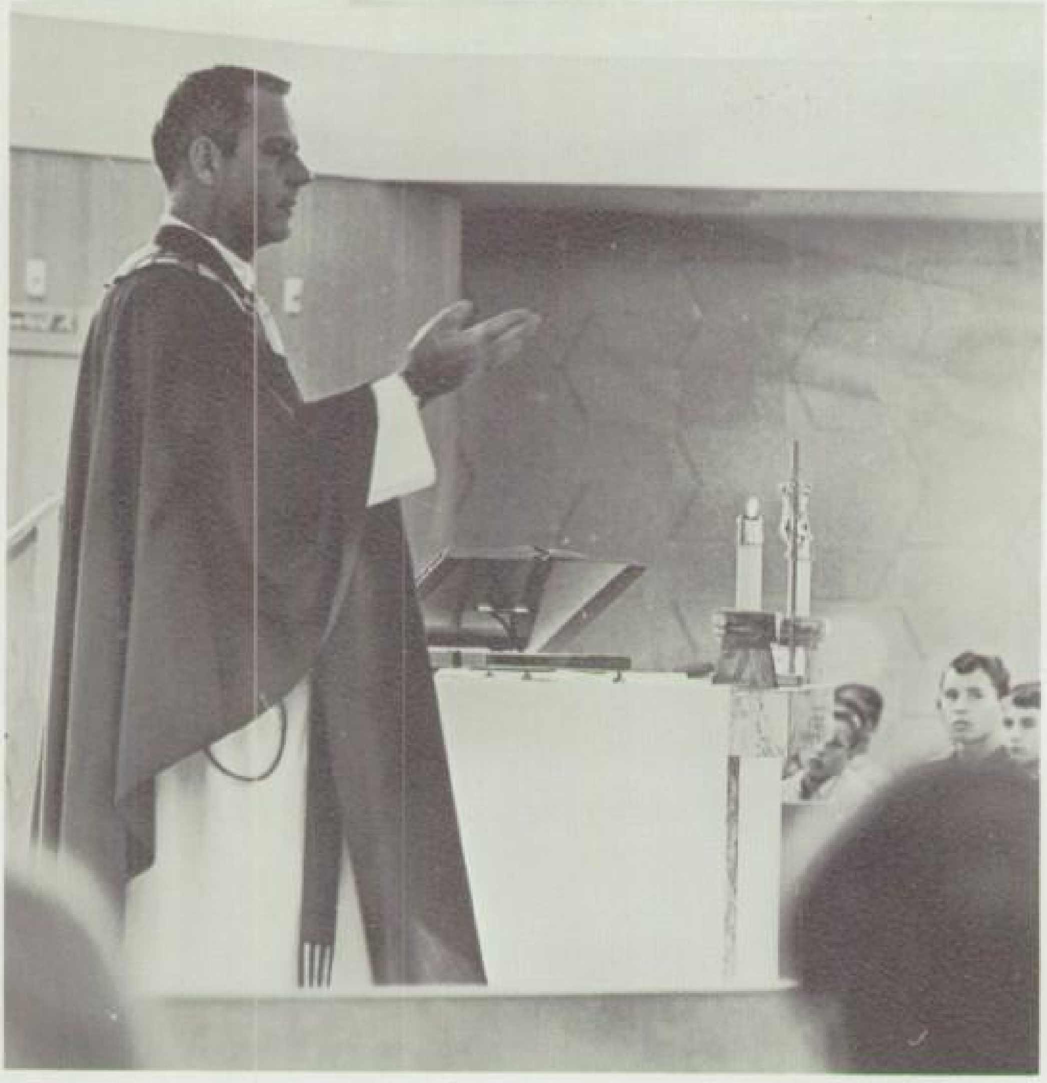
Father Kieran

Father Kieran jumped into his work this year and worked like a fiend. He acted as Chaplain to the Mount in return for Sr. Paula teaching a class at Maur Hill and he met regularly to talk with the Negros of the community, practicing the involvement we hear so much about these days. On top of all this, his big job, the coordination of every active segment of Maur Hill, grew by a two school retreat and the struggle for better Maur Hill-Mount relations.

The editors of the '68 Maurite wish to say, "Thanks," for a job well done.

The many faces of Father Kieran





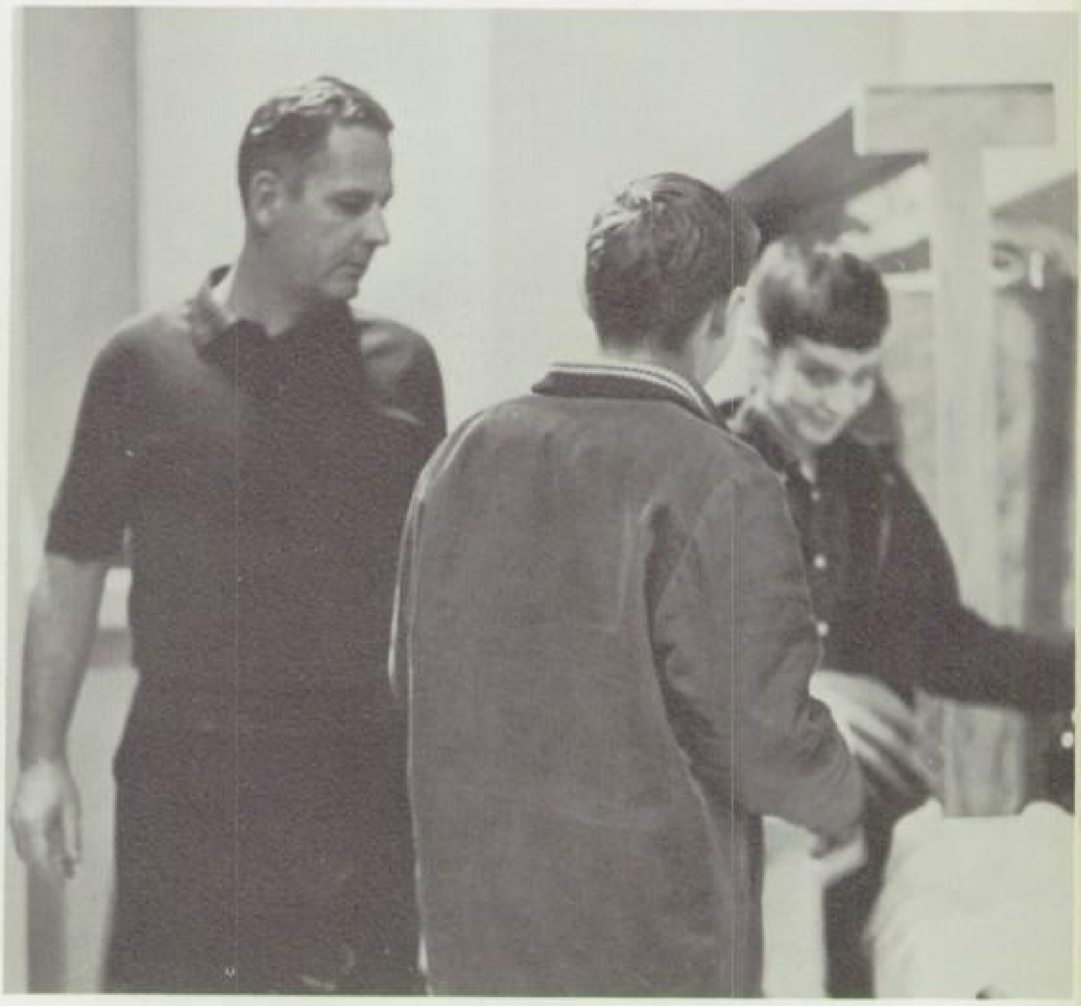
Chaplain

Father Wilfred (above) throws out a question to the student congregation for some ideas. (below) Father catches Gene Hanlon hiding the wine in the dirty linens.

"Are you not your brother's keeper?" That's Father Wilfred, that same big hearted slouch you always saw carrying that jug of wine from the refectory to the sacristy. We always wondered where that wine went because he made that trip at least every other day.

He moved into the Academic building this year, to the chaplains office where he could sit, feet on the desk, baiting someone to talk to him. You wouldn't think he'd ever accomplish anything that way, but he somehow managed to look pathetic and write sermons at the same time. Every Wednesday and Sunday he'd preach on Christian involvement while guitars and singing kept us awake.

John Broski once remarked, "Whenever I feel bad, I just look at Father Wilfred and then I smile."



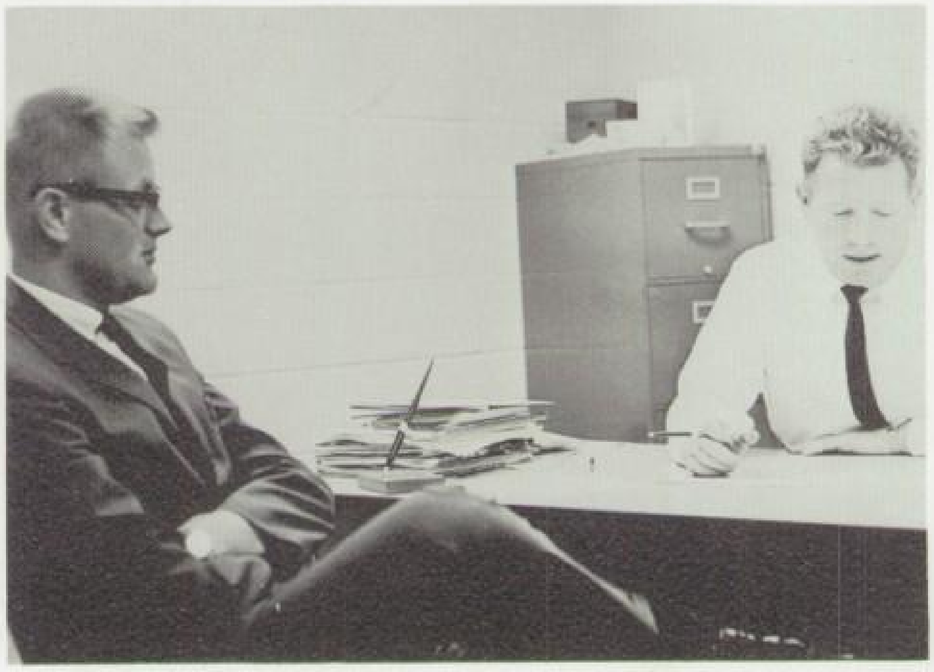
Mr. Stork gives special reading aids.

Guidance

This year Maur Hill's guidance department was expanded into two rooms, a counseling office, and a vocational guidance office. The doors were always open to students seeking information on colleges, improving their study habits, or finding out about their numerous standardized tests occurring throughout the year.

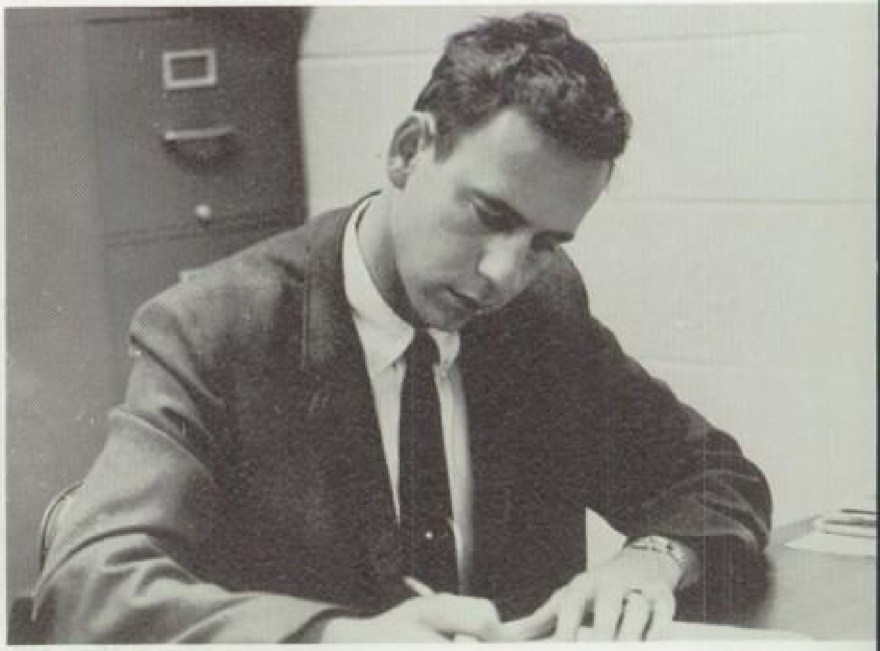
Teachers also found Mr. Galley's kind and reassuring words very beneficial.

"Jerry, your personality tests show....."



Tim Diebolt asks Mr. Galley about his PSAT scores.

Mr. Stork catches up on homework.



Typing class improves with practice and Father's patience.

Business

Fr. Roger remained busy as usual this year with his numerous responsibilities. Raffling off a camping trailer, raising funds at homecoming, and supplying the student body with a duck dinner were among his accomplishments. Father also taught bookkeeping, and typing class.

Father (left) forges ahead in his alumni work. Intricacies of bookkeeping are explained by Father Roger. (above)

Language

The language trio returned: Father Bruce in French I and II, Father Owen leading Latin IB, II and III-IV and Father Martin teaching Latin IA, Spanish I and II and Special English. One can hear all kinds of language at Maur Hill.

Father Bruce (above) collects homework from Tim Conrad and Gino DeVaughn. (right) Father Martin drills Jose Mazon. (below) Father Owen clarifies his relationship with Steve Fisher.

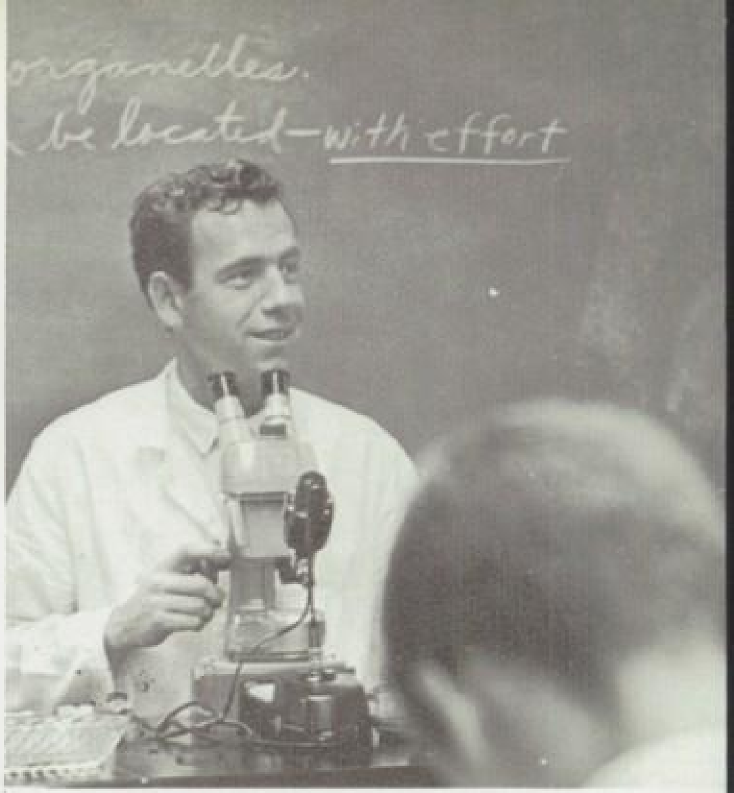
Art

Everybody wanted to join Art class this year. Record enrollments flooded two Art classes, Ceramics and Mechanical Drawing. Pencil-happy artists who wouldn't believe that "Only God can make a tree" brought Father Herman through his smoke rings and into the great outdoors. The mud nuts molded clay into masks and jugs. Posters occupied the canvas crew. Culture had come to Maur Hill.



The gentle aromas of sulfur dioxide and formaldehyde mingled with the hot air in the halls of the Science wing this year.

The tinkling of breaking test tubes announced Chemistry's return, spooned out by Father Bruce. Father Bruce also taught Biology C. Mr. Stork held his lectures and labs in Biology A and B, and taught General Science. Father Gabriel presided over the junior Physics courses.

Mathematics

This year saw an addition to the Math staff which had previously occupied themselves with the mental torture of slide rule haters. Sister Paula appeared each afternoon to teach Advanced Algebra B. Father Herman wielded the erasers again in Geometry A and B. Mr. Andra lost his students in Algebra IA, IB2, Advanced Algebra A and Trigonometry. After all the tears were mopped up he had created an army of caculating Androids. Father Paul tore through Algebra IB, IC and Geometry C.

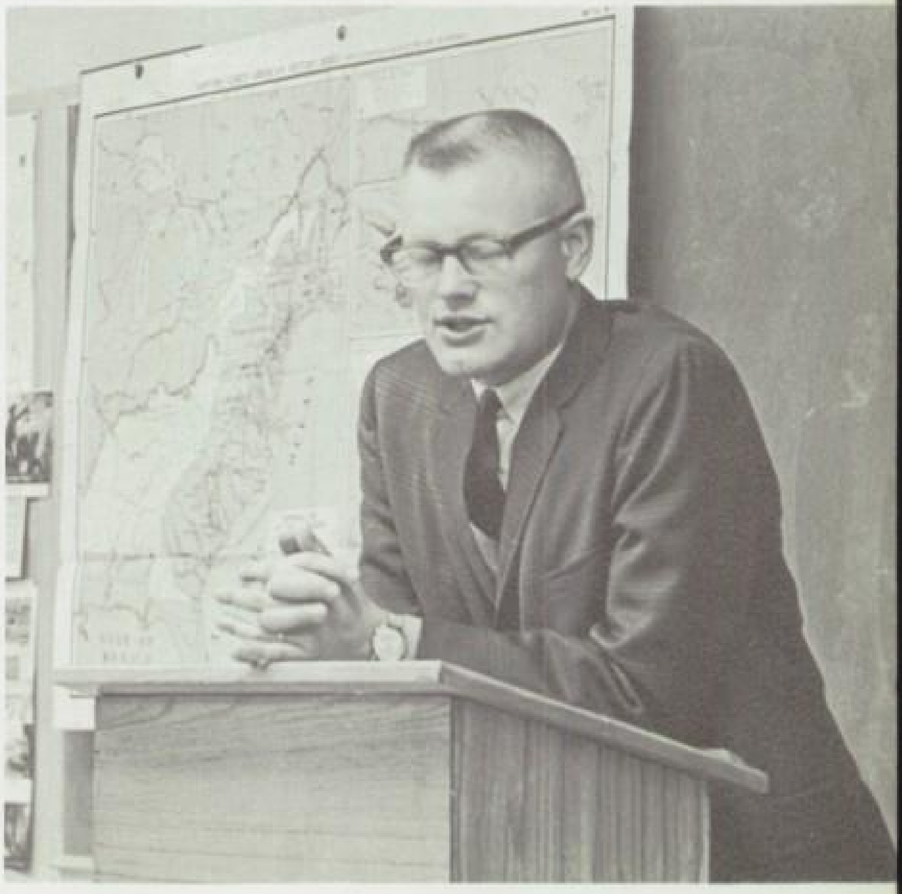
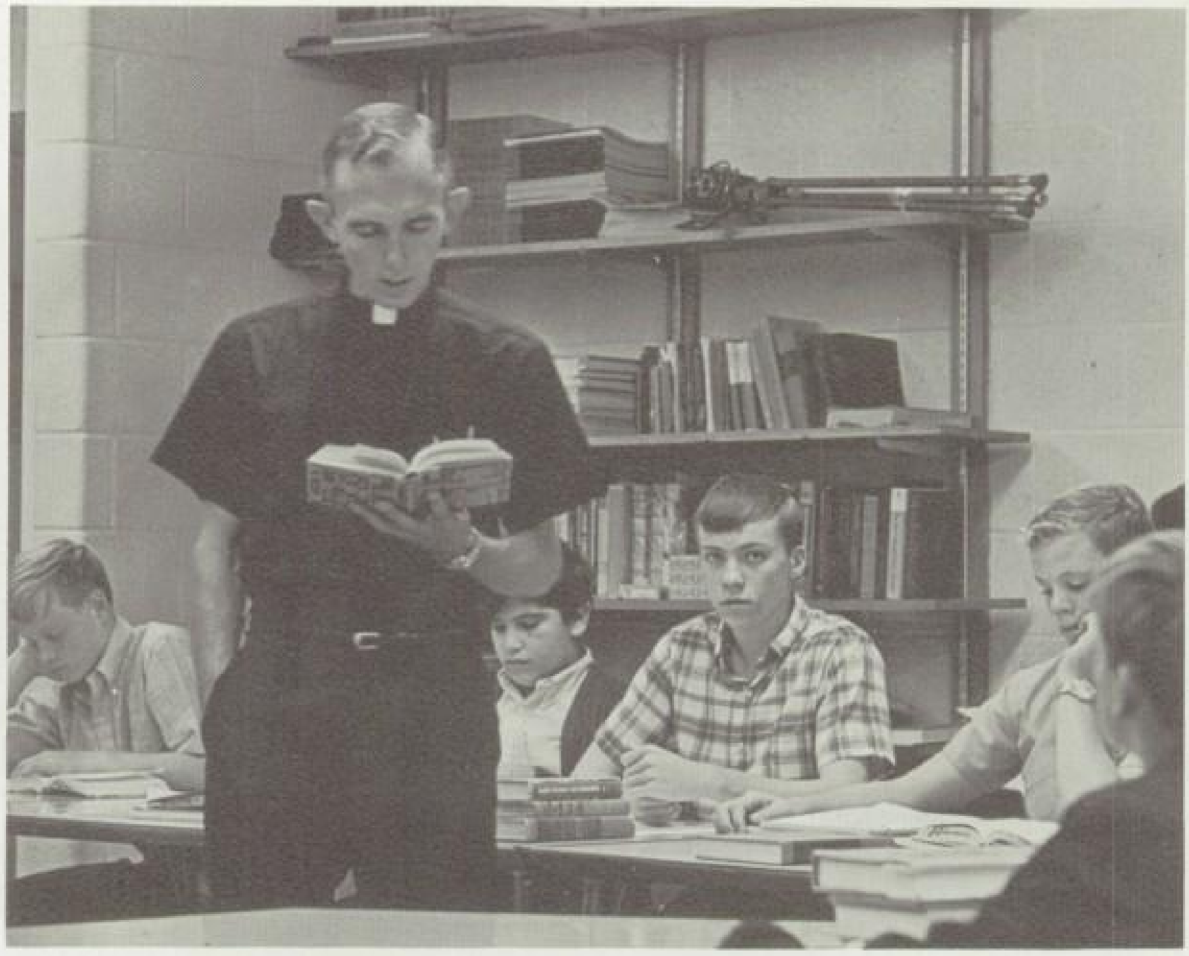
Social Studies

The Social Studies instructors again concerned themselves with man and his plights in the past, the present and the future. Father Camillus covered the past in World History A and B, hitting the major trends that shaped our modern society. Mr. Brown and Father Barnabas, teaching American History A and B respectively, dispelled the myths of our glorified American heritage and clarified the motivation of the American Revolution. Mr. Brown followed through with American Problems A and B where he discussed the present economic situation of the United States. Mr. Galley gained yardage with his Citizenship and Physiology courses while Brother Jude analyzed the Hippie Revolution and other social phenomena in Sociology. All strove to help their students understand their relation to the rest of mankind and society.

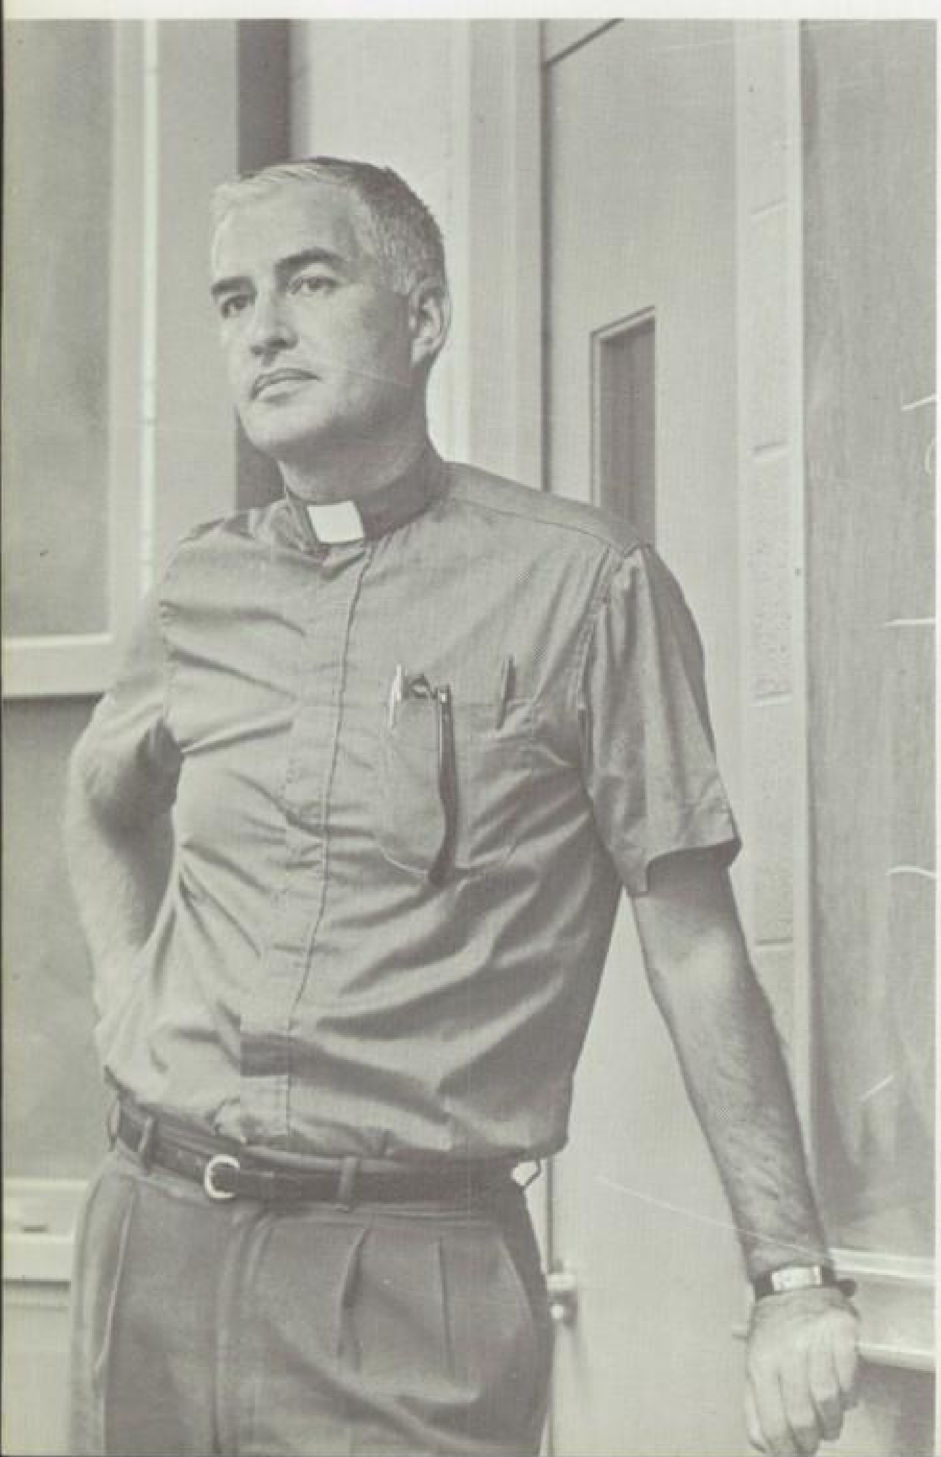
Mr. Brown strikes his immortal "J.B." pose.



English



Father Jordan (above) explains some common gramatical errors to his freshman class. Father Kieran (right) waits for something to happen.



The English department maintained its high status and the instructors maintained their cool in this year's communication quest. Father Wilfred taught his students to analyze themselves as well as the author in his English IA, IIB, IIIA and IIIB Father Jordan conducted English IB, IIA and IIIB2 through meandrous mazes of literature. Father Thomas, champion of the Emeralds, donned his sword and stemmed the advance of the Plop armies, using English IIC, IIIIA and IIIIB as his battlefield. Father Kieran mopped up resistance with English IC.

The English team played hard and won. They finally discovered Simon and Garfunkel.

Shirly Campbell

Mr. Al Pickman joined the personnel as caretaker of St. Leo's Hall. He was the only addition to the staff. Mrs. Clayter and Sylvia Busey still kept the Academic Building clean, along with Marvin, of course. Father John and Mr. Roth took care of the library and Miss Hansen handled the desk work with Mrs. Conrad. Shirly Campbell worked in the office on Saturdays.

undergrads

The undergrad years at MH are a period of adjustment; a period of filled demerit cards, messing around in the dorm and halls, waiting for seconds in the refectory, losing your money over the Roost counter, sitting out the study halls, doing a fantastic amount of homework and learning to live in a routine with other people. It's a time for trying to find your own personal way and for making bigger and better mistakes, a time of running to catch up and get in line.

Because Maur Hill underclassmen are going someplace. Where they go is up to them.

Freshmen

It was a big year of new experience for the Freshmen, getting into the swing of life on a high school campus. The three week Big Brother initiation period of orientating the Freshmen to their new home was a big success, and a rewarding occasion for Frosh, parents, and Big Brothers alike. It showed through in the way Freshmen really got to work.

The Freshman class this year was synonymous with action. They truly involved themselves in every school function possible. Freshman football players forged on to an undefeated season. School spirit was boosted on every side by their undying enthusiasm. At the Day of Christian Renewal Freshmen took the lead in preparing signs and banners that provoked thought and inspired the students.

Sophomores

For the Sophomores, this was the year that was. Upon their return from the summer vacation they found themselves floundering in the swirling floods of work and extra-curricular activities. With the same determination they showed in building a giant homecoming bonfire twice, they developed the strong study habits that allowed them to make the long step onto the land of academic merit. They also actively voiced their opinions at Great Books, kept the stream of articles flowing for the Tatler, and showed their thesbian talents to all in Dramatics Club presentations. They can all be proud of a year in which they got involved.

Juniors this year were known for the things they got done. They seemed to appear wherever anything needed doing. They contributed to the freshman orientation as big brothers and as big boosters to the Maur Hill spirit. Juniors on the field made up a large proportion of the football team and half of the cross country team. A number of basketball starters don't graduate until next year. In the cheering section, they let everyone know that they were there. They built sets for Dramatics club, harmonized in Glee club and ran the projector during Saturday night movies and assemblies. Juniors commentated and formed the bulk of the choir at Mass, as well as performing the less romantic job of cleaning the chapel. In time of need, the Juniors were always there. Like Chickenman, "They're everywhere, they're everywhere!"

seniors

The life of a school reflects the leadership of the school. The class of '68, like the year of '68, was often a thing of bits and pieces.

The seniors came to their last year full of big plans and enthusiasm; and the big plans were too big and the spirit quieted. Some sloughed off, some got tangled in extracurriculars and many became the average students who worked a little and played a little. They functioned quietly, as individuals and friends. Only rarely did they work as a class; they could band together to meet a need, but only a few felt comfortable as leaders and these didn't set out to lead.

But still, the seniors were followed; not out of fear, but out of friendship. This was the mark of 1968.

Seniors

To list all the accomplishments of the Seniors this year would be impossible as well as superfluous, for this class was not a collection of supermen, but rather a collection of real people, individuals with individual ambitions. Each assumed his own responsibilities and did his best, sometimes failing, but always trying. Four years together did form an unseverable bond of friendship, though, between these individuals. Four years of fights, love affairs, bull sessions, study sessions, teamwork on the playing field and any number of unnoticed experiences together made up a life more secure and more friendly than any will experience again.

Tim Agnew

1950-1968

Tim Agnew died of a kidney infection during the afternoon of January 22, in the Atchison Hospital. He had been ill for a long time; the trouble was first noticed just before his sophomore year, most of which was spent in the hospital. He was tutored by Maur Hill faculty members during the year. He began both his junior and senior year, but was hospitalized in both cases before their end.

Members of the Mount and Maur Hill student body attended the rosary and the prayer and song service held for him. Junior and seniors attended his funeral while freshmen and sophomores attended a Mass held at Maur Hill.

Tim was a fellow student; a senior; a friend; a son; a brother. Need more be said about our loss?

". . .And what was started long before must finally come to an end. . ." So it is now. And after years of football games, mixers, dinners, and plain old Saturday afternoons downtown, the class of '68 is ready to move on to better things.

This years seniors do not leave empty handed, however. They take with them the experience, knowledge, and enjoyment of the past four years. We, the rest of the student body, benefit too. For we have met them, and their individuality, their striving, and their sincerity have influenced us. Because of this WE are better. And what greater tribute can be given?

The Mount and Maur Hill have a rather symbiotic relationship. Certainly they're not one school, but just as certainly, they're a little less than two.

The schools grew a little closer this year: the retreat, the combined band and the mixed discussions in Great Books brought Mounties and Maurites together in new ways, in addition to the Pep Club's cheering, the Dramatics and Chorus work, the occasional dances and the weekend socializing.

But the Mount has a life of its own and that life could easily double the size of this book. The teachers, the student government, the contests, the clubs, the projects, the bulletin boards, Sodality, Schola, the Views, G.A.A., Riccardi, fourth floor, the assemblies—how do you catch a world in twenty pages?

Juniors

"Spirit" seemed the big word this year, and the class of '69 made good use of it. They placed a high number of students on honor roll, at the same time involving themselves in Dramatics, GAA, and other extracurricular activities.

Then, there was Homecoming. . . Never before have the Mount juniors played such an active role in it's festivities, painting and printing countless signs and (of course) . . . dancing.

This display of effort and enthusiasm by the juniors can leave no doubt as to their potential as next year's seniors.

Sophomores

Struggling up from the depths of a lowly freshman, this year's sophomores did everything possible to illustrate their true concern over Mount and Maur Hill activities. They out sold all other classes in the Christmas item sale, were inducted into sodality, and sponsored their own homecoming dance.

But their records cannot end here, for the class of '70 seemed to have an unexplainable "second wind" which carried them into the expanding fields of Dramatics, Great Books, and journalism, in which they succeeded admirably.

Freshmen

The class of '71 had a remarkable first year. It took them no time at all to acquaint themselves with the traditions and activities of the Mount, in which they themselves later took an active role.

At the beginning of the year they met their Big Sisters. Then there was a little socializing, as they attended both the annual school picnic and a special gathering sponsored by their "sisters".

Yet it was after this that the freshman class showed its true colors. Success seemed their very craving as they placed the highest number of students on the first quarter honor roll. In addition to this, they participated in pep rallies, ball games, and in general excelled in every regard.

Sharon,

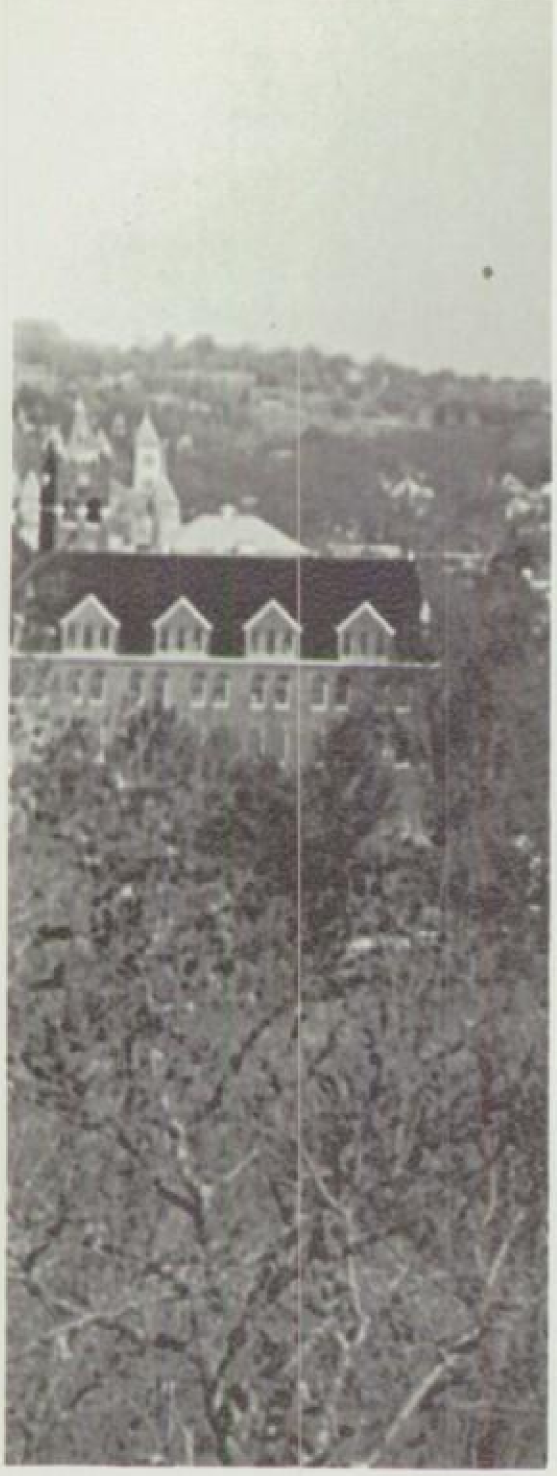
The wind comes up from the south, rippling across the grass in the open fields, flowing over the roofs and corners, catching students between the buildings. It tugs at them once and is gone into the town beyond.

Into the town . . . into Atchison. The town is always there; the community, the Mall, the schools, the homes, the hills and the river.

The wind comes once and is gone. 1968 is gone too. A few fragments remain, in its people and in this book, as leaves scattered into Atchison and beyond.

Our thanks to Atchison for helping make and save these few bits of a year.

MaryAnn



Sharon,

Billowing blue is the Welkin, my sky, as the shredded of yesterday.
Though smoking white beyond the blue...

Welkin,

"You are the mirror reflecting the face of her who sent me to you (Why cloud over when I say this?)
You are as fickle as the breezes who play in your lap;

But then I enjoy the breezes
when they whistle through dripping leaves, and play a duet with ~~the~~ the green-leaved boughs in the cool of the summer night and smoothly glide over the strings of my summer night's sleep.
